Avert Catastrophe.

London, Jan. 29. The Times prints a telegram from British residents in Johannesburg, South Africa. The detaptate the Armenians, Mr. Tarpis (Dean, spatch declares that the stundton is zery dangerous. The Boer forces it says, are arrogantly dictatorial and with their own executive are deadly opposed to granting reforms for the benefit of the Utlanders.

Washington, Jan. 28. In presenting a position in the Senate today in regard to the Armenians, Mr. Tarpis (Dean, and said that the only charge against them, their only orime, was being Christians. The time had come, he said, when an official notification should be given to Turkey and to the Mobam-Ultianders.
Forces are still concentrated round the town. The executive is choosing a site for a fort.
The despatch adds that a cita-trophe can only be averted by the adoption of argedt measures.

Evangelistic work ear be better done by the Japanese, but the training can better be given by phofessors and pastors from abroad.

We recommend that the prudential committee take measures to send annually to Japan men of established solity and reputation to speak on various subjects in furtherance of missionary work, and that in this plan they endeavor to secureline co-operation of other missionary societies. The most of the work in Japan has been disarmed of its suspicions, against Christiahity. The missionary is now free to go at will into all parts of the empire. The Bible and Christian literature have free direculation every where. The phesons are open for the Christian evergells. Christian teachers are in many of the government rechois, with fullitherty to tack Christian its the pupils outside of school hours. Percecutors as thing of the pasty x-cept as it occasionally appears in disgoise. The theological problems of the world are now discussed in Japan, and that, too, without a balancing foundation of Christian and life. The evidence is complete that our missionaries have been embently faithful in presenting the truths of the gospol, and quipe of the

There is a deeper meaning which ness. There is a deeper meaning which I wish to explain—a light to this dark-

After is pinced in tent reason than have of light and shade, to absorb and interpret its meaning.

The composition of this work consists of two figures in baserchief, one a youth of public mien, pregnant with fruth, sensitive to the sympathies around him, interrupted in his life's work by the ordained figure of death, whose shadow falls on the degree of the dalt where he rests, itenoting the rad of day—eternal sleep. On his face one can see how trustfully and peacefully he succombs to the mysteries of the hereafter; how viguely his youthful mind conceives dea h's meaning, yet he believes, and fears not, that certain something that so gently, yet so powerfully, hids him follow on and on somewhere.

this work I move that the give an initiative tion of material force, dustrolled by the beautiful power of truth and to make more pleasant the squads from the herp of death, which are to use the tones of joy, not the wait. The relief when completed will be 10 x 8 feet.

SOME STAGE STORIES. I FUNNY EXPERIENCES OF FAMOUS AC

TORS AND ACTRESSES. ants Paid to Performers of Unpopular Parts by Persons In the Audi-Several Interesting Incidents Re lated by a London Newspaper.

Playgoers of today do not appear to fall so easily under the influence of the power of the performer or the vividness a striking situation as in times gon by. They do not so quickly lose their own identity, so to speak, and become so absorbed in the drama as to be carried away with the interest of the plot to such an extent that they feel them-selves not merely spectators, but partici-pants in a real and tangible incident. But when plays deal more with homely and natural stories and less with the fautastic and "woman with a past" classiof drama, folks appear to have been more emotional and enthusiastic. The lorget the mimic side of the ricture and only saw before them life in minia ture, as they understood it. They had the human note very finely tuned and For example, when they were playing the almost immortal "Green Bushes!" at the Adelphi during one of its many revivals, Mme. Celeste, in the character of Miami, the Indian, had to shoot her English husband, by whom she had been deserted, and, after firing the pistol, a woman started up in the pit and exclaimed in a loud voice. Served him right; it's just like m menster!" This explosion of insufted womanbood, profuced by the "canning of the scene" and Mme. Celeste's powerful acting, was naturally followed by a burnt of laughter from all parts of

It is certain that art frequently pos theater, in the autumn of 1874, when the "Two Orphans" was being acted shat a young lady sitting in the stalls burled her opens glasses, with the exclamation, "You heast!" at Mrs. Huntley (La Frochard), who was ill treating Mr. Henry Naville, the crippled Pierre, in the garret scene. It was certainly a high compliment to that actress power, though it was a dangerous way of send-ing a testimonial.

But it was a critic who morose, or the first night of the late Charles Reade's drama, "It's Never Too Late to Mend," at the Princess theater, in 1866, under the management of George Vining, and volumently protested against the flogging business in the jail scene, as being inhuman and untrue to the discussion that ensued in the papers tended to crowd the theuter nightly for many months. But andiences did not always take things too seriously and were in the habit of expressing themselves very candidly when occasion invariably rely upon success for his old wheezes. He was onco hissed at Sadlor's Wells theater after singing his celebrat-ed comic song (what a dull piece it was to read, by the way!) "Tippitywichet," and he appealed to the audience. He "had nodded," he said, "frowned, sneezed, choked, gasped, cried, grinned, grinned, hiccorghed—he had done all that could be done by brow, chin, cheeks, eyes, nose and mouth—and what more did they want?" "Why, we want," yawned a languid voice from the pit, "we want a new feature!"

Sometimes it is the manager who gives yout to his feelings when sitting in "front," as was the case with Henry Hatrie, for many years manager of Covent Garden theater in the early of the century. He was watchin er in the early par or the century. He was watching the performance from the stage box of an actor of the name of Faulkner, who had recently avrived from recently arrived from the provinces and was making his appearance on the met-ropolitan boards as Octavia in "Tho Mountaineers." Fankher was not quite up to the mark, and when he exclaimed in a deep, guttural tone, "Oh, where is my honor?" Hurris exclaimed, "I wish

Mucready, of whom many stories were told, says in his "Memoirs:" "I remember on one occasion acting in 'Venice: Preserved,' A long and rather drowsy dying speech of my poor friend, Jaffier, was 'dragging its slow length along,' when some one in the gallery, in a tone of great impatience, called out vary londly, 'Ah, now die at once!' when a voice from the other side imme-diately replied, 'Be quiet, you blackguard,' and then turning with a patrontake your time, will you?"

zing tone to the lingering Jaffier, 'Just As an example of how easily the most cone extent in the mimic action of the stage, we may recall the story of an eminent special pleader who was witessing a performance of "Macbelli." In the scene where the Thane of Cawdor, questioning the witches in the cuvern, says, "What is't you do?" the answer is, "A deed without a name." This phrase struck the ears of the pleader at nce, and he cried out excitedly: "A leed without a name? Why, 'tis void." -London Globe.

following "Ire members of the f. O O. F. and friends passed a delightful evening at their rooms last night. An entertainment was furnished by W. A. Coles, the blind humorist and ventriloquist. It was one of the most enjoyable entertainments ever given here, and caused much merriment. The professor, in his humorous readings, showed much eleveness, and his selections were all very laughable. He is witty and bright. In his efforts in ventriloquism he proved himself a muster of the urt, surpassing anything in the line seen here in many years. The occasion will long be pleasantly remembered."

appointed a committee by the Bangor Board of Trade for the purpose of taking the necessary steps for the establishment of an army post on the Penobscot River near this city, and in order to perform this duty this committee has quaphyed one of the department of the pincering of the Maine State College to make a survey of three different lots on the outshirts of the city, all of which are closely connected with the line of rallways running through the city, also with trunsportation by water down the Penobscot filver. Each lot has sufficient had around it which could be advantageously utilized for an army post to the extent of six or eight hundred acres. One lot in particular has been examined by a large number of military men and exampy officers and has been pronounced one of the best locations for a military post that they know of in the New England States.
